As she hung from the pipe, celine saw a bright light. It was the fire men, she realized, shining powerful torches down the manhole. She started tapping on the pipe and battering the walls with her hands and arms. "I'm here! she shouted". "Come and get me out".

She watched as the firemen lowered the metal rods and she tried hard to shout above the noise of the racing water.

Then, to her astonishment and anger, the lights and rods disappeared. It was black now in the drain, and she felt objects smashing against her, bags, branches, the contents of bins all swept away in the flood.

Unable to feel her legs, she knew, she couldn't hold on to the pipe any longer. I've got to do something. She thought. The water level had dropped to her chest.

"There is got to be an exit further on", she reckoned. "All this water has got to go somewhere. Perhaps there's a grill. If it was shut she could be smashed to pieces against it, but if it was open she was free. She had to find out.

Questions:

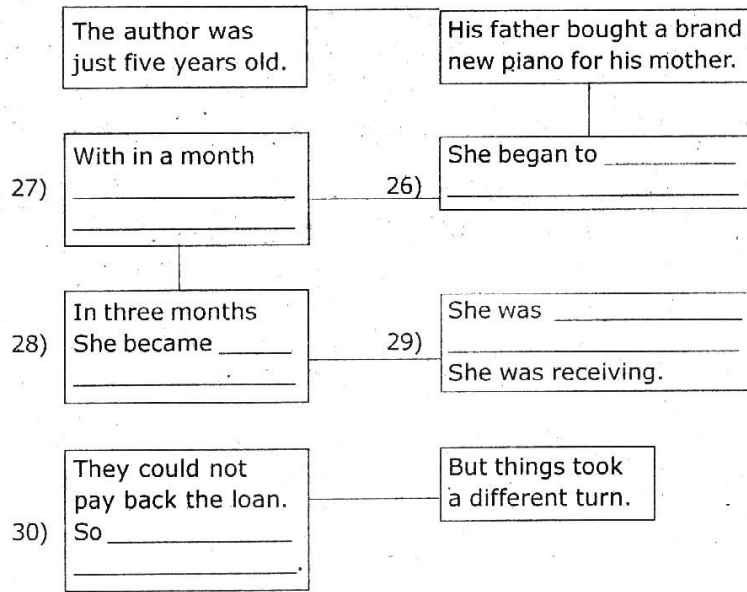

- 21) What did celine do when she noticed firemen's light?
22) Did the fireman hear celine's voice? Why?
23) Why were the fireman's light and rod disappeared in the drain?
24) What were mashing against celine?
25) Why did she reckon to get an exit immediately in the drain?

The name Eskimo comes from the language of the northern Red Indians and means a person who eats raw meat. It is fitting name; for the Eskimos live mainly by hunting and fishing. In winter they do not cook the animals they catch for food. It is because they live in an icy wasteland. They cannot find and fuel for fire. The only fire they have is produced by burning the oil of seals or whales in shallow, saucer shaped lamps, made from pottery or stone. These lamps are used primarily to give light but the Eskimos can also boil their meat and fish over them. These food are also frozen or dried. There is another reason why Eskimos sometimes eat raw meat; Raw meat gives them the greatest possible nourishment. They don't get vegetables rich in vitamins. This loss is made up by eating - uncooked kidneys and liver of their hunted animals. These organs contain an abundant store of all the vitamins needed by the human body. (145 words)

A thirsty fox one day espied,
High up upon a vine,
A bunch of grapes. He looked and said,
"I wish those grapes were mine".
"No bite have I yet had nor sap,
My thirst is getting stronger,
If I can eat those berries up,
I'll thirsty be no longer".
The ground was bare, the grapes hung tree,
The fox's leaps were many,
Just one inch I'm short," said he.
Of grapes he got not any.
For long he tried, and tried in vain:
His legs had lost their power.
Said he with wisdom, "I'll refrain,
I'm sure those grapes are sour".
